2025 CASE

FERRARI & PIRELLI M&A GRAND PRIX, SPEED MEETS GRIP

As a buy-side analyst at IFSA Network, your team's expertise and strategic acumen have once again placed you at the center of a high-stakes opportunity. Last October, your Managing Director was invited by Ferrari to the United States Grand Prix in Texas. As they witnessed Ferrari's dominance in the race, a unique deal opportunity emerged.

Ferrari, a legendary name in motorsport and luxury automotive engineering, is seeking to strengthen its current position in the industry by acquiring a strategic partner. During a private discussion, Ferrari's executive team highlighted Pirelli, the globally renowned tire manufacturer, as a potential target.

Ferrari has granted IFSA Network exclusive rights to assess this potential acquisition, positioning your team at the forefront of one of the most significant M&A opportunities in the motorsport and luxury automotive sectors. This deal presents numerous strategic and financial challenges, with Ferrari expecting a compelling recommendation.

Your task is to develop a comprehensive pitch that addresses the following key questions:

- Should Ferrari N.V. proceed with the acquisition of Pirelli & C SpA?
- What competitive advantages would this deal provide Ferrari (e.g. Technological Innovation, Branding, Market Positioning)?
- Are there alternative targets that might better align with Ferrari's long-term growth strategy?

Your Managing Director expects a to receive the deck by March 9th, 2025. Winning this internal competition not only means securing a $10,000 bonus but also reinforcing IFSA's position in the market with this high profile transaction.

RECOMMENDED GUIDELINE

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Outline your solution, and your most important arguments, in no more than one slide.

CHAPTER 1: INTRODUCTION

Introduce the reader to the problem by:

- Providing a brief history of the case
- Analyzing both companies in terms of their history, operations, market position, and strategic direction
- Giving an overview of the relevant industry/sector

CHAPTER 2: FINANCIAL DUE DILIGENCE

What would an acquisition mean in financial terms?

- Do a complete valuation of Ferrari and Perilli. What's the best method to do this valuation?
- What do your results imply? Is this acquisition feasible?
- What are the appropriate metrics that show if the deal is profitable or not?
- How should this operation be financed?

CHAPTER 3: NON-FINANCIAL DUE DILIGENCE

Is this deal a good idea from a strategic point of view?

Topics of this chapter may include, but are not limited to:

- Synergies, if the acquisition is successful?
- Threats that may prevent a successful integration?
- How would Ferrari benefit from Pirelli's capabilities?
- Implications for the relevant industry/sector?
- What potential risks could arise from this acquisition, and how might they impact the overall implications of the deal?

RECOMMENDED GUIDELINE

CHAPTER 4: CONCLUSION

What should Ferrari do and why?

- In this final chapter, you should derive your solution by balancing the pro and counter arguments for the deal. If you come to the conclusion that Ferrari should acquire Pirelli, provide a brief outline of a possible deal and the next steps to follow. If you believe that Ferrari should not go for this acquisition, provide an alternative investment strategy they could undertake to acquire similar capabilities, and strengthen its position.

This only serves as a recommendation of procedure. You are not constrained by it in any way, and are encouraged to explore further avenues and thought processes.

Please read the Rules & Regulations carefully.

BEST OF LUCK
